

opee River, having made its circuit, returns to the south ; and, at the point of Wilbraham Mountain, now near at hand, it is again close to the line. It was at this spot where the Chickopee River is nearest, and "below the line," that Marcus Lyon, of Woodstock Ct was murdered, in 1805, by two Irishmen.

Young Lyon was on horse-back, in the road, returning to his home, when the assassins shot him with a pistol, pulled him from his horse, and with a huge club mangled his head in a shocking manner. They afterwards rifled his pockets, turned his horse into a pasture, and dragged the dead body to the river, where they sank it with flat stones. The murderers, whose names were Daley and Halligan, were afterwards arrested, tried and executed, at Northampton.

At NORTH WILLBRAHAM Station, passengers for the Wesleyan Academy leave the train. This is an institution of high reputation.
